Each student-patient team created a shared online journal chronicling their experiences, emotions, and opinions and discuss these life experiences with each other over the phone or video chat prior to the conference. In doing so, this track aims to explore how patients and medical students may better support one another and improve medical education through an exercise in empathy building. Two of the 2016 patient-student teams come together with their mentors to share their learning experiences with the larger Medicine X community in a panel discussion.
